Prairie Dawg's Old West Chronicles

A Compendium of Useful Information

August, 2026

A Cowboy's Lariat

Most of us can easily recognize a cowboy by his hat, spurs, and the saddled horse from which he swings a lariat rope. In fact, the lariat (derived from the Spanish term “la reata” meaning to catch or fasten), is one of the most versatile tools a cowboy has at his disposal. While it’s sometimes also referred to as a reata, riata, or a lasso, the term lasso is actually a verb, as in the action of throwing the loop of rope around something. In fact, there is no faster way to tag yourself as a layman than by calling a lariat a “lasso.” Most people, however, who actually use a lariat, typically refer to it simply as a rope, and the act of using it, as roping.

So, let's refer to this iconic cowboy tool as either a lariat or a rope. A cowboy's lariat is made from a stiffened rope so that the noose, commonly referred to by cowboys as a loop, stays open when the lariat is thrown. A stiff lariat also allows a cowboy to easily open up the loop from horseback to release cattle, as the rope is stiff enough to be manipulated just enough, in the hands of an experienced cowhand.

The lariat has a small reinforced loop at one end, called a honda or hondo, through which the rope passes to form the throwing loop. The honda can be formed by a honda knot (or another loop knot), an eye splice, a seizing, rawhide, or by a metal ring. The other end of the lariat is sometimes tied simply in a small, tight, overhand knot, to prevent fraying with the unraveled strings left loose, to provide a visual cue as to the end of the rope.

Most modern lariats are made of stiff nylon or polyester rope, usually about 5/16ths of an inch or 3/8ths of an inch in diameter and come in lengths of 28, 30, or 35 feet for arena-style roping, and anywhere from 45 to 70 feet for vaquero-style cattle roping. The reata is made of braided (or less commonly, twisted) rawhide and is made in lengths from 50 feet to over 100 feet.

A reata can be different levels of stiffness (called lays, in roping circles) depending on what type of rawhide is used. For instance, bull hide makes a very stiff rope suitable for heel roping. And, if you're curious, the traditional Mexican way to treat a reata, to keep it supple, is to tie it between two trees, rub it first with lemon juice (cut a fresh lemon in half and rub the fruit along the length) and then rub it with beef fat. Yep, you read that right! This process keeps the leather from drying out or becoming stiff, since artificial products will make the reata too limber. A Mexican maguey is a type of "grass" rope made of agave fiber (the word "maguey" means "agave" in Spanish), and are also used in the longer lengths of the reata.

As you can imagine, there are about as many styles, sizes, price points, and options for ropes as there are for shoes. You can get ropes in a variety of lengths, colors, levels of softness, and made out of a range of materials, with the main difference between a cowboy's lariat and a common rope being the extra stiffness of a lariat.

The standard rope you'll see used at most rodeo events of team roping and tie-down roping is made of braided nylon and is between 30 and 35 feet in length. Although these shorter nylon ropes can be used for ranch chores, it is common to have what is known as a ranch rope for work around the ranch.

A ranch rope is a type of lariat that is much longer than its rodeo brethren. Ranch ropes can easily be between 50 or 60 feet long, and are generally not as stiff. Ranch roping is almost never the fast-paced action you see in the rodeo arena, with the primary difference being that for ranch roping, the cowhand is dealing with a herd of livestock rather than a single animal.

Successful ranch roping demands accuracy and controlling the movements of the animal.

After catching the cattle, the lariat can be tied or wrapped (dallied) around a saddle horn, but make sure to get those fingers out of the way! With the rope dallied around the horn, the cowboy has greater leverage over the livestock, and can effectively use his horse as the equivalent of a tow truck with a winch to get the animal to where it needs to be.

Ropes, when not in use are typically carried on the saddle horn by use of a leather strap, which may be fitted with a buckle to aid in ease of use when needed at a branding pit or to catch a runaway calf.

Other than the weight, material and construction of a lariat, what really separates the rope used by a cowboy from every other rope, is the skill of the cowhand who wields it. Skill that has been honed through years of catching horses in the morning, to be used in that day's work, dragging steers for doctoring at mid-day, or generally roping every manner of thing sitting around a campfire during the evening.

Cowboys love their ropes as an essential tool of their trade, such that they are constantly perfecting their craft. In fact, visit any high school with a rodeo team, and you will see a herd of students walking around with their rope at the ready, looking to lasso everything and anything. Cowboys use their ropes to catch livestock, horses and occasionally those whom they are courting (if you catch my drift). But, to successfully deploy their rope takes practice and patience to find the exact moment to throw the loop so that it will catch its intended moving target. And, skill and patience are exactly what separates the skilled ropers from new ropers.

Some cowboys hunted with a rope. There have been wolves, bears, mountain lions, and any number of animals caught with one. And perhaps the most dreaded use of the Western rope was to dangle taut over a tree limb, to hang horse thieves. Dakota Skipper's father was a cowboy in Nevada in the 1940s, and he always said that they would hang any horse thieves they chased down and captured on the range. So there was quite a variety of uses for a cowboy's rope, not all of them "politically correct".

See ya on the range.

Winchester Model 24 SXS Shotgun. 2-3/4" chambers Full Choke and Modified. Mfg date: 1952. The Model 24 competes with the Stevens 311 and Savage/Fox Model B as an affordable, utility SXS and a total of over 116,200 were Mfgd. The Model 24 is a true hammerless gun, as opposed to having concealed hammers like most double guns, since it is striker fired. It was produced only as a field grade gun with blued receiver and barrels, wide 7/16" raised solid rib, smooth black walnut stock with lacquer finish, double triggers, and spring powered extractors that elevates the shells when the gun is opened. The forged steel receiver body of the Model 24 is rounded. The Model 24 was designed with two lumps, one centered beneath each barrel, leaving a tunnel of space between the two lumps. It has a clean breech face and is held closed by a single underbolt that engages a notch in the double barrel lumps. In the area between the 24's dual lumps is a cocking slide and the extractor. The Model 24 is about as wide through the breech and receiver as a SXS gun can be. The weight is about 7-1/2 pounds. It is a 12 Ga gun with 30" barrels. It measures 46-1/2" in overall length and has a 14-1/4" length of pull. Approximate drop is 1-1/2" at comb and 2-1/2" at heel. $500

News & Notes

Six Stages

We shoot six stages at Tusco. A few people have told us that they drive a good distance to shoot at Tusco and would like to shoot as much as possible.

Obviously we only have room for five shooting bays. So what we do is shoot the first stage you start on twice. Consider it a warm up stage. Only five stages will be scored. You can take your best time on your first stage. If you don't want to shoot it twice you do not have to. This would provide more shooting for our shooters.

New SASS Magazine

With the new release of the SASS Quarterly Cowboy Chronicle, I once again would like to start collecting any unwanted issues of the magazine. We will use these for our promotional events, like our Tusco Long Riders' Day at Kames Sports. Please either black out or cut off your name and address or I will do it before they are passed out. Thank you!

Facebook Page

When you make a post about Tusco or share pictures on Facebook, include #TuscoLongRiders. Let everyone see what we are all about.

News & Notes

New Shooters Shoot for Free at Tusco

The Tusco Long Riders will be offering FREE SHOOTS to ALL FIRST TIME SHOOTERS AT TUSCO. This is ONLY for a shooter's first ever shoot at Tusco. (*this is only for monthly matches, excluding High Noon 3-day Shoot in October, and the Charity Shoot in November.)

Cowboy Swap Meet at Monthly Shoots

As a reminder, feel free to bring your old Cowboy Gear, Guns and Equipment to sell at our monthly shoots. It's a good opportunity to sell some of your unwanted stuff to your fellow shooters. Your items are your responsibility.

Pre-Paid Shoots

Looking for that perfect Gift for your Cowboy Friends and Family? How about a Pre-paid Shoot to a Tusco Monthly Match. They cost $10.00 each at a shoot or they can be mailed for $10.50. Contact Buckaroo Bubba at pittfandwr@aol.com or 330-348-5637 if you would like to purchase them.

Help Wanted at Tusco

If you are available to help set up target stands/props before our shoots it would be greatly appreciated.

A little bit about us

Jim & I have always wanted a family of our own. Although we love our 5 fur kids, we long for a baby. After learning we were unable to conceive a child, Jim and I decided to pursue the adoption of a newborn. Adoption costs are astronomical (anywhere from 25k to 50k or higher) and although we were able to raise some with our savings, GoFundMe page, and church donations, we are still lacking the funds needed to apply for a match. We decided to take our love of crafting and open a side business to hopefully raise some more funds for our future family. Designs By Scamper is a tribute to our pup Scamper who passed away in 2015 from cancer.
